The Parts Box

Hello again and welcome to the third instalment of the parts box brought to you by the wonders of online access or the not so wonderful mail service.

With fall upon us and winter coming around the bend, we will be soon into the prime building season for many of us. Nothing like building some plastic to make the 20 hours per day of 40 below darkness go quicker.

I personally hate winter. I loathe and abhor it. I hate the cold, the dark and the word windchill. I hate the chit-chat about the cold, the dark and the windchill. Ugh.

But I do like the extra time I can spend building. It gives me a false sense of hope that maybe someday I might actually get all the kits I have towering over me in my model room done. And I do want them all done.

I am not a collector but a builder. My problem is the deficit of built kits as compared to the newcomers to wall. Maybe this is a problem all of us face to certain degree.

To me when buying a kit, one of two things happens.

1. Bring a kit home and then quickly open it up, surveying the pieces, decals instructions, and so forth, then on the shelf it goes, waiting for its turn on the workbench.

2. The kit makes such an impression it immediately moves to the front of the line, much to the other kits' chagrin. After all, they have been patiently waiting their turn and then this happens! Sometimes I find a kit has fallen from the wall, or at least that is what I always thought. Maybe due to frustration they jumped, or worse yet, were pushed!

Regardless of when the kit gets started, I find that I can acquire kits faster than I can build them! Not a revelation I know, but a problem nonetheless.

I have found that I enjoy a kit more when it is on the workbench, or even better on the table at a meeting. And although the paint might not be perfect, and the foil job could be better and the engine isn't that detailed - it is done. And more importantly, off the wall (no pun intended).

So what is the answer to this dilemma of too many kits and not enough time?

I don't know what the answer is, but I find that the only thing that seems to help is building. Funny how that is.

Until next time,
Keep your blades sharp and your brushes clean.

Paint Recycle Day, Saturday, Aug. 16, 2003

What a day! As a rookie, I found the experience, as Mr. Spock would say, "most interesting". The event was scheduled to run from 8:30am 'til noon, but the huge line-up resulted in the club processing paint until about 1pm. The line started with about 10 vehicles in the queue well before we opened, and it grew and shrank throughout the morning. Vehicles were often seen queued from our spot in the north-east corner of the Walmart South parking lot, winding down the road fronting Chapters, proceeding north down the right hand turn lane on Albert Street south, and then making a left to come to an eventual end part way down the east bound parking lane on Gordon Road.

I'm sure that Ron sighed in relief when he saw the number of volunteers that actually arrived. At one point there were only five confirmed participants.

The plan was to start processing two vehicles at a time, and then go to three at a time. Well, towards the end, we managed to get up to four vehicles unloaded at a time.

Right from the start it was slow going as the second vehicle in line was a pickup with its bed completely filled with old paint. Turns out it belonged to the Re-Store which works in conjunction with the City to recycle paint.

All in all, the day was a success, and we managed to process over 450 vehicles. A big thank you goes out to Dwight Mercer from the City of Regina for his help, wisdom (his re-hydration reminders kept us all from becoming human prunes) and time. Also, thanks go out to club members who donated their time and sweat (the temperature was at least 32 degrees) - Ron Gall, Dave Kapp, John Kapp, Len Schmidt, Tim Maw, Neil Hill, Kyle Stevens, Larry Draper, Darin Wielgoz and Brian Miller. Hopefully I have everyone accounted for.

Al Magnus

Dave Kapp Sounds Off!

First of all let me start out by saying 2 things: One I do not condone murder (very often) and two I am a big Law & Order fan. But after viewing an episode of Law & Order SVU last week, I feel I must vent.

On this particular episode the murder was committed by a man who was apparently stealing cars from dead people's estates or something like that. It seems that he was doing this because of a bad childhood. The bad childhood was because...get ready for this: in 1969 his dad bought him a snap-together model kit instead of a detailed kit for his birthday!

The whole case was solved by the detective that stutters (not Lenny, another guy) finding a model car part laying on a closet floor in this murderer's childhood bedroom. The detective immediately identified it as being a rear view mirror from a '57 Chevy Belair built in (get this) 1969!

I don't remember models having any sort of distinct mirrors in 1969! As I recall if they did have mirrors they were likely to be little blobs of chrome plastic - certainly not detailed enough to tell by looking that it was from a '57 Chevy Belair. Even now if you gave me a box of mirrors and asked me to find the '57 Chevy Belair mirror I bet I couldn't pick it out. And I know my model mirrors.

Then the idiots trot out this guy's model collection from 1969 as evidence. That's thirty five years, people! And for models that many years old, they really stuck together well! And heavy? They sounded suspiciously like die-cast to me when they set them down!

Wait - there's more...

Then they find a model box for a Ferrari model. This thing is about the size of a shoe box for Kareem Abdul Jabaar or whatever his name is. Or some other guy with really big feet. The top of the box looked a bit like a model box but the sides were plain red. Why didn't they get that guy that Dean buys all of his fake boxes from and at least make it look a little bit real? Its called a hobby store, writers. Maybe you could visit one if you're researching a show on models. Dang!

Then there is the whole question of snap together kits in 1969. Did they even have snap togethers in 1969? I didn't think so, but to be sure I dug out my 1969 vintage Auto World catalogue and checked. Nope, not even a hint of a snap kit.

The point of my rant? If your going to portray modellers as killers at lease get the facts kind of straight. On the other hand any publicity for modellers is good publicity, even if it portrays us a psychos!

Modelling the Wright Stuff

Come see a celebration of 100 years of powered flight at the Diefenbaker Canada Centre, running from November 30, 2003 to January 18, 2004. Featured will be a model display paying tribute to the history making flight of the Wright Brothers on December 17, 1903. Also featured will be displays commemorating the 100th year of Harley-Davidson motorcycles, and the 50th anniversary of the Chevrolet Corvette.

RUSI Event

The RCAF veterans are showing a video entitled "Forgotten Bombers" on Friday, November 7 at 1300 hrs at the RUSI. The video runs about 45 minutes and will be shown in the "lounge" on a quite large screen TV. Frequently there are some questions, answers or comments from old hands attending that is also interesting. There is no admission charge and no reservation is required, though technically I do have to know who's coming so I can sponsor guests.

A pretty fair lunch at a reasonable price ranging from soup, through salad, sandwiches and hot meals is also available.

Soup of the day and a BLT sandwich with coffee will cost about $7.00. Of course the bar is open. Lunch is served from 1200-1300 hours.

Dress "regs" have been significantly relaxed in past year or so. While jeans/"combat pants"/shorts are frowned upon, clean casual trousers such as tans or any "dress" trousers with dress shirt (tie not required) or conservative sport shirt (no "Hawaiians" please) are fine.

Please let me know no later than noon Thursday, October 31 if you'll be lunching, and preferably by same date/time if you'll be viewing the show, so I can let the manager know so she can ensure there is enough seating.
